The Gallows of Dawn

by JOHN A. BORNOTY

| "You're either born to power, or crushed by it."

On Italy's Amalfi Coast, an American waiter named Jack Sullivan falls for Maria Morocco, a schoolteacher engaged to the heir of the town's most powerful family. Their forbidden romance sets off a chain of jealousy and betrayal that reaches all the way to Maria's own father, the town's detective, who will do anything to protect the Enzoro dynasty's grip on power. What follows is a trial that threatens to destroy them all. Maria will do whatever it takes to save the man she loves, Jack braces for a justice that was never meant to be fair, and Tulio must choose between his legacy and his daughter. As dawn approaches, even destiny has a surprise.
